William Hodge has in his new play, "Fixing Sister," used some of the foreign material which he found in Booth Tarkington's "The Man From Home," Lawrence Whitman—or William Hodge as ne is otherwise known—wrote the play. Mr. Hodge is fortunate in being able to supply his own plays. "The Road to Happiness," which led to a blind alley after he reached New York, was useful for two years on the road. Now he has devised "Fixing Sister," which is in four acts. The climax is the raiding of a harmless card party by the police in order to punish a sister with a frivolous taste for society gambling. In addition to this episode there is the attempt of a pair of foreign adventurers to swindle the American society folk out of a large sum of money through a bogus land transaction.

"We are allies," he said. "We should stand by one another in business and art."

But the two singers were firm.
"I engaged both M. Muratore and Mme. Cavalieri," Mr. Altschuler said yesterday, "for $1,000 for the concert, According to my understanding that amount assured the services of both of them. Now they have seen fit to demand twice as much."

It is said that the contract of M. Muratore and the soprano with the Chicago Opera Company called for $1,000 an appearance whether both or one of them saigs.

The question now is whether or not the tenor will be engaged at the Metropolitan Opera House for next season. His presence there would certainly

WAR TOUCH IN THE SALE

The Robert Riviere & Son, London, sale of rare books in fine bindings at the Anderson Galleries, declared by many to be one of the most important collections put on the market since the Hoe Library was sold, last night netted the owners $38,410. The collection, including illuminated manuscripts, cluding illuminated manuscripts, rare first editions of famous books, jewelled bindings, extra illustrated works and rare engravings and more than twenty-six items sold for more than $300.

Of particular interest was a remarkable collection of original works by the great masters of engraving in France, in forty volumes, bound in full crushed levant, sold to G. Weis for $9.000.

A little touch of the war in Europe in forty volumes, bound in full crushed levant, sold to G. Weis for $9,000.

A little touch of the war in Europe was felt in the sale. Riviere, in transmitting the collection to be sold here, stated that in addition to the "finest examples of our work, the collection includes many important items left with us, on sale by several clients, who on account of prevailing conditions in this country wish to dispose of them."

Considerable interest centred in the manuscript on vellum, in jewelled binding of Edgar Allan Poe's "Annabel Lee and Other Poems," written out and illuminated by Alberto Sangorski, which was sold to George D. Smith for $1,260. The front cover is an elaborate design in which the monogram of Poe is surrounded with a border of jewels. The poems in manuscript are richly illustrated and illuminated in colors and burnished gold.
